

Kisner

Dean, who is now 14-years-old, was initially adopted. However, four years ago his adoptive parents split up and his adoptive mother abandoned him. Dean was living with his adoptive father, however he had no rules, structure or real supervision and he got caught in some minor trouble. At that point, the adoptive father decided he didn't really want him back and has made little effort towards Dean since then. Dean was placed in a youth shelter until his older step-sister and her family took him in. Since that point he had made significant changes in his life and loves his new family. His step-sister's family was already a blended family with 4 children, the foster father is a fireman, and the foster mother also works. With 5 children to care for, finances are often tight.
